THE OVERALL MARKET

- Earnings growth continued to be resilient in Q3|25, while labor conditions showed signs of weakness.
- Valuations and other financial and economic indicators continued to suggest possibility of limited upside to major equity indices.
- Federal Open Market Committee restarted rate reductions.
- Debt sustainability questions among sovereign creditors are likely to emerge in coming years, particularly if growth slows more than expected.

THE EVENT-DRIVEN MARKET

- Activist activity remained above average in Q3|25. (Bloomberg)
- M&A deal volume remained above average in Q3. (Bloomberg)
- Number of distressed issuers remained below average. (Bloomberg)

THE LOOK-AHEAD

THE PROJECTION

Based on our research and decades-long experience, we believe the next few months may bring us the following:

- Above-average activist activity, due to shareholder pressure to unlock value amid a lower return environment.
- Increasing shareholder activism in international markets, notably where valuation discounts seemingly persist.
- Above-average special situations volume and an increasing number of idiosyncratic opportunities.
- Cost and tariff-driven margin pressures may encourage efficiency improvements through changes in corporate structures.
- Trade tensions may lead to divestitures while simultaneously encouraging retaliatory cross-border M&A challenges.
- Reduced government deficits may impact some industries adversely.
- Growing number of distress candidates during next 12 to 24 months, with increasingly attractive entry points.

THE POSITIONING

The Investment Team believes that economic and financial risks remain, despite the generally strong risk-taking environment. Lagged effects of interest rate increases and trade tensions may begin to meaningfully impact the global economy. Heightened interest rates, labor market concerns, and trade conflicts may tighten conditions, although tax cuts and deregulation could counteract those negative effects. We continue to believe that portfolio construction is critical, especially if macroeconomic and financial conditions deteriorate. More stressed conditions in the near- to medium-term could create highly favorable risk-reward profiles in many events. For Q4 2025, we expect to continue the Fund's overweighting in activist and special situations. Among the variety of sub-strategies to which the Fund may allocate, we believe activist and special situations will offer the most attractive risk-reward profiles for the portfolio at large.

Bloomberg US Aggregate Bond Index is a market capitalization-weighted index that is designed to measure the performance of the US investment grade bond market with maturities of more than one year. HFRX Event Driven Index is an unmanaged index that measures the aggregate performance of event-driven securities, exposure to which includes a combination of sensitivities to equity markets, credit markets and idiosyncratic, company specific developments. Indices assume reinvestment of all dividends and distributions and do not reflect any fees, expenses, or sales charges. Morningstar Event-Driven Index is an unmanaged index that measures the aggregate performance of strategies which attempt to profit from security price changes due to certain corporate actions, such as bankruptcies, mergers and acquisitions, and other atypical events. S&P 500 Index is a widely recognized, unmanaged index of the approximately 500 largest companies in the United States as measured by market capitalization and is considered to be generally representative of the US large capitalization stock market as a whole.
